The Railroad Case.

Special to the Gazette.

DENVER, July 22.—Mr. Pratt, Judge Beckwith and Judge Usher spoke in the U. S. circuit court to-day on the motion to appoint a receiver pending the settlement of existing litigation. At the close of Judge Usher's argument Judge Hallett announced that the court would adjourn until to-morrow morning.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Yellow Fever.

MEMPHIS, July 22. Five new cases were reported to the board of health this morning. Four deaths have occurred since last night—Thomas Kernan, Harry Ray, Lewis Bremond, Mollie Hammart. The two colored military companies, the McClellan Guards and Memphis Zouaves, have volunteered their services to protect property in the city if necessity arises. The city authorities will doubtless select a site to-day where a camp will be established to which the poor of the city will be removed.

PENSACOLA, July 22.—By order of the board of health Pensacola has quarantined against all points west of Mobile, and including points and places in the Mississippi Valley south of Cairo, Ills., excepting seaports in Texas. No persons or freights from the places included or infected will be allowed to enter the city without a proper permit from the board of health.

WASHINGTON, July 22. The following telegram from the agent of the railway mail service at Little Rock was received at the postoffice department to-day:

LITTLE ROCK, July 22. The board of health say emphatically that fumigation of mails makes no difference and that no mails must pass St. Louis. If so no mail matter will be allowed to be taken from the car or agents handling it to stop at Little Rock.

MEMPHIS, July 22. Two more cases were reported to the board of health this afternoon, both colored. Two additional deaths occurred.

The Howard association held a meeting this afternoon, and detailed two of their members to ascertain from the physicians where nurses are required, which will be furnished, but the organization as a whole will not begin operations. They do not think the situation is at present sufficiently alarming. Under the direction of J. D. Standcliffe, president of the board of health, to-day put into practical operation all the rules of the national board of health. All baggage will be disinfected under the supervision of sanitary officers. The rules as applied to passengers and freight will be rigidly enforced. The authorities find it difficult to select a site for a camp. Owing to the citizens living in adjoining towns fearing that the citizens will bring the fever in their districts. The exchange remains open, but business is at a standstill. Camp Father Mathew, under the supervision of Father Walsh, is to be re established. Requisition has been made for 1,000 tents, which will be furnished as soon as those furnished by the government arrive. Over 1,000 people will by this means be removed from the city. The steamer Hard Cash, which left this evening for St. Louis, had a full list of passengers. The Louisville and Nashville railroad to-day refused half rates to the authorities to points beyond McKenzie's.

NASHVILLE, July 22. A Shelbyville dispatch says, Rev. B. F. Teller, of Memphis, who reached that place sick on the 8th inst., is prostrated with fever. The state board of health to day adopted rules for the guidance of the supervising medical inspector. The city council met to night to adopt measures to put in force a limited quarantine in the inspection of persons from Memphis, and the establishment of a quarantine hospital in case of need.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Dennis Manning, fireman on the Steamer City of Meridia, plying between Havana and New York, died in Brooklyn to-day of yellow fever. The board of health has taken precautions to prevent the spread of the disease.

Central Pacific Railroad Election.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Central Pacific railroad for the election of officers was held to-day. The vote cast was very full, nearly all the eastern stockholders being represented by proxies. The vote resulted in the election of the following directors: L. A. Stanford, C. P. Huntington, Chas. Crocker, E. H. Miller, Jr., E. W. Hopkins, Charles W. Crocker, and W. V. Huntington. The officers elected are Leland Stanford, president; C. P. Huntington, vice president; Chas. Crocker, second vice president; E. A. Miller, secretary; E. W. Hopkins, treasurer.

Sad Suicide.

CHICAGO, July 22.—A distressing and mysterious double suicide occurred last night at Hyde Park, a southern suburb of this city, the particulars of which only transpired early this morning. Three maiden sisters named Elizabeth, Anna and Nora Trowbridge, aged respectively 43, 40 and 30 years, have been living for many years in good style in that town upon revenues derived from an estate left them by their mother.

Recently their father had succeeded in getting the entire property away and had left them penniless. When they had become fully aware of this state of affairs they decided to die together and spent Sunday and Monday in preparing for death. They nailed up the doors and windows, adjusted small hempen cords about their necks and kicking from beneath their feet, hooks piled on ottomans and chairs and quietly strangled to death. The youngest sister, who is a dwarf, remained in the meantime in an upper chamber, and although the deed was done about six o'clock Monday night, she first gave warning at nine o'clock, and the bodies were not cut down until midnight, as with the greatest difficulty she could be induced to tell her story, and she told it in such a disconnected and rambling way that its accuracy is even now doubted. She is in a state bordering on insanity. In her chamber was found a knife of a razor sharpness, and a slip of paper on which was written, "We must nail up the doors."

The trio have always been regarded as erratic, and although nothing against their character has been known they have been known to have held noisy and disturbing midnight orgies that are now regarded as evidence of long standing insanity.

Mr. Trowbridge, the father who was so seriously denounced by his daughter Nora as the real cause of their misfortunes, is said by those who know the circumstances to have deserved no such harsh words. He has managed the property of his daughters for them and they have been well and liberally treated at his hands. On account of a real estate transaction they became imbued with the idea that he was abusing his trust, and it is believed that their already erratic minds dwelt on this belief so constantly that they became insane on the subject. They had a monthly income of $125 and their own house. Their fear of poverty was not well grounded. No inquest.

Miles and Sitting Bull.

DEADWOOD, D. T., July 22.—A Fort Keogh special says an engagement took place near the mouth of Beaver creek on the 17th inst., between two companies of troops and Lieutenant Clark's Indian scouts of Miles' command, and 300 hostile Sioux. The troops lost four Indian scouts killed, and two soldiers wounded. When Miles' main column, which was 12 miles behindy came up the Indians were pursued a distance of 15 miles, but made their escape to Sitting Bull's camp. Very probably another night has taken place before this. Bear Wolf's band of Crows, who are at Terry's Landing, report 300 lodges of Sioux on this side of the Missouri on the way to Keogh to make friends with the whites.

Wisconsin Republicans.

MILWAUKEE, July 22. The republican state convention meets at Madison to-morrow at ten o'clock. The friends of Gov. Smith claim 137 out of the 266 delegates. The friends of ex-Gov. Ludington claim 115, and both deny the claims of each other. Some talk of a dark horse, with mention of ex-Gov. Washburne. If Smith fails on the first ballot he is likely to be defeated. In the afternoon and evening will be the celebration of the anniversary of the anniversary of the organization of the republican party in Wisconsin. Singerfield and Zach. Chandler speak in the evening and Congressmen Burrows, of Michigan, and Williams, of Wisconsin, in the morning. In the evening there will be an immense attendance.

MADISON, July 22. There is an unusally large attendance, already a great crowd, promised for the republican state convention and anniversary to-morrow.—David Atwood will be president of the convention, the proceedings of which promise to be short and harmonious. Gov. Smith apparently has a large majority, though Ludington's friends will demand a ballot. The other state officers will be nominated without question. Senator Baker, of Racine, will be chairman of the state committee, vice Rable resigned.

Premature Explosion.

HUNTINGTON, PA., July 22. By the premature explosion of a blast in a quarry near this city this afternoon, three men, Michael Ryan, a sub contractor of Philadelphia, Philip Roncomoni and A. M. Keith were instantly killed. Their bodies were terribly mutilated. James Davis escaped with the loss of his hearing.

Shooting Scrape.

ATLANTA, July 22.—Samuel A. Grasth, a railroad and commercial traveler, of this city, last night shot A. M. Reed and his son, at Opelia. They attacked him in his room at his hotel, it is alleged on account of an improper intimacy with Miss Reed. Grasth was badly cut on the head and hand. The elder Reed was shot in the eye and abdomen, and the younger under the right jaw. The elder Reed will die. Grasth is under arrest.

A Centennial.

GOSHEN, N. Y., July 22.—The hundredth anniversary of the battle of Minisink, in which forty-four state militia were killed by Indians and tories, under Brandt, opposite Laxawaxen, was celebrated here to-day with a large procession and public exercises. One hundred thousand people were present.

FOREIGN.

Bonapartist Caucus.

PARIS, July 22.—At a Bonapartist caucus on Saturday, only fifty four senators and deputies out of one hundred and fifteen were present, and though with only two dissensions, a resolution was finally adopted, declaring Prince Jerome head of the Bonapartist family. Twenty two of those present had previously supported an amendment, which was outvoted, declining to pronounce on questions beyond the jurisdiction of the meeting, expressing their sentiments of fidelity to the empire, and the principles of order which have always inspired its policy, as this amendment conveyed a censure on the antecedents of Prince Jerome. The feelings with which he is regarded by a large section of are pretty apparent. Many of the sixteen kept away to avoid committing themselves to his recognition. Paul De Cassagnac, in his journal, reproaches Prince Jerome with entertaining a fear of exile which deters him from issuing a manifesto.

The Zulu War.

LONDON, July 22. A correspondent with General Crealock telegraphs that eight chiefs with their followers have sent an intimation that they would surrender. John Dutin's scouts report that one of the kraals occupied by Lord Chelmsford was the Zulu base of operations. It is anticipated that the king will recire into the inaccessible bush. It is certain that his army will refuse to follow him if he attempts to. The Amatoga tribe are threatening the Zulus and the king's prospects are gloomy. We have in camp 1200 Zulus surrendered. The power of the Zulus appears to be gone and submissions are made hourly.

The Treaty of Berlin.

LONDON, July 22.—In the house of commons to-day, Sir Charles Dilke, calling attention to the execution of the Berlin treaty, said: The Turks promised to carry out the reforms stipulated within three months, but a year has elapsed and nothing has been done. He moved that an address be presented to the Queen, asking her majesty to use her influence to procure the prompt execution of the treaty, and also to endeavor to procure for Greece a rectification of her frontier as agreed on by the powers. Sir Charles complained of the government's isolated policy with regard to Greece. Shaw Lefevre, liberal, seconded Dilke's motion. Handbury, liberal conservative, moved an amendment that the government had successfully carried out the treaties. Sir Henry Wolfe, a conservative, seconded the amendment.

Sporting at Wimbledon.

LONDON, July 22.—The six prizes in the Whiteley competition at Wimbledon have been pooled and equally divided among ten competitors who made the highest possible scores. F. Hyde is of the number.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

There were no races in Chicago yesterday on account of the wet track.

Abraham Coleman of New York, formerly proprietor of the Burnet House, Cincinnati, died yesterday.

R. D. Walden, of North Adams, Mass., ex-tax collector, charged with embezzling $100,000, has given bonds in $10,000.

President Hayes has accepted the invitation of the President of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association to be present at its 10th anniversary. The first religious services will be July 30th.

The funeral services of the late Gen. Wm. F. Berry took place at Baltimore yesterday at Ft. McHenry. There were present General W. Sheridan, and Colonels Anden, Reid and Tourtellotte of his staff. The remains will be taken to Buffalo for interment.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The cabinet discussed yesterday the yellow fever situation. The acting postmaster general was instructed to use all the means in his power to keep mail communication open.

Secretary McCrary submitted information as to Sitting Bull's movements, stating that several bands of Indians are joining that chief, who is becoming demonstrative.

FOREIGN NOTES.

A forced loan is being raised in Peru.

Silver was quoted at 51½ pence in London yesterday.

The house of lords have passed the army discipline bill.

Gautemala has increased her duties 25 per cent., payable in cash.

The revolution in Magdalena is over and Presiden Robles is in prison. About 600 lives were lost in the struggle.

The claims of Italian subjects against Chili amounts to 1,200,000 soles. The losses were occasioned by the bombardment of Pisagne.

Three hundred barrels of gun powder were shipped from Woolwich yesterday for the Cape of Good Hope.

A Berlin correspondent states that as the Duke of Brunswick is severely ill, the question of a successor is being discussed.

The British and French ambassadors have refused to withdraw their notes demanding the restoration of the powers of the khedive, including the right to make treaties.

Ex-Empress Eugenie has informed Rouher that she will not consent to further subvention of the press, and he has ceased to direct the political policy of the Order. The shareholders of that Journal will meet soon to consider what course to pursue.

A Vienna dispatch says the emperor and principal ministers having left Vienna it may be considered certain that the question of reconstructing the ministry has been deferred until after the assembling of the provincial diets and possibly even till the assembling of the reichstroth, when debate on the address will furnish indications of the strength of the various parties.

A financial paper of London says the prospectus of the Panama Canal Company is expected to appear in August. The ordinary capital will be 400,000,000 francs, represented by 800,000 shares, 11,000 of whice the commissioners will retain. The company also propose to issue obligations to the extent of 200,000,000 francs; making the entire capital 600,000,000 francs.

JOB WORK.

Mr. Joseph Sailer, financial editor of the Philadelphia Ledger, has not failed a single day to contribute to that paper since July 1, 1840. This is a unique record.

The value in gold of the currency now in circulation is $734,801,994 78. In the palmy days of 1865, so often referred to by inflationists, it was $692,256,354 77.

The first opportunity is taken to express the regret which we have felt at being placed in a position where the interests of our shippers and connections, and the company's duty to itself, came in conflict.
From Circular 75 Signed by J. F. Goddard General Freight Agent of the A. T. & S. F. Co.

This is a polite notice to the shippers over the A. T. & S. F. road, that their interests will be invariably and persistently sacrificed when they conflict with the interests of the road. The frankness of the notice can at least be commended.

In Scribner's monthly for August, Mr. Noah Brooks in speaking of the poetry and imagination in Mr. Lincoln's speech gave the close of President Lincoln's first annual inaugural. For real heart-stirring eloquence we do not think it can be surpassed. The passage is as follows: "The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battle field and patriot grave to every living heart and hearth stone, all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

In another column we quote a very deserved tribute to Captain James B. Eads whose unfaltering faith and perseverance has performed a work which in engineering skill, and we may also say commercial importance, is not inferior to the completion of the Suez canal and the Pacific railroad. Colorado is tributary to the Mississippi valley and will therefore enjoy the fruits of his genius. We would therefore join in all that the Times has said in honor of the indomitable energy, ability and courage of America's greatest engineer, James B. Eads.

It seems that the bureau of geology and surveys under the directorship of Professor Clarence King will devote itself this year to exploring the mineral regions of the United States. This is timely. The government can in this way do a great work for its people. There is now a feverish excitement in all parts of the country about mining and it is well that some authentic and scientific reports should be made on the subject. Of course the other scientific objects of the bureau will not be entirely neglected, but simply subordinated to this one for this season.

The wheat crop this year is estimated to be 380,000,000 bushels. Last year it was 425 000,000. It is thought, however, that better prices will more than make up this difference to farmers. The U. S. Economist makes the following remarks on the wheat market: "Corners in wheat are almost as common as corners in stocks, and gambling on margins in produce exchanges is as frequent as at the stock exchange in Wall street. The wheat market is now in an excited condition, while the temper of dealers, large and small, is decidedly bullish and the market advancing from day to day. It may continue in this state for a while longer, but there is no ground for such a rapid turn upward. The crop is more than an average one in yield, and although the export demand will be very heavy, the surplus stock will be more than sufficient to supply it. One gratifying feature, however, is that the farmers will receive fair prices for their crops this season."

There has been considerable misunderstanding in regard to the relation of Jay Gould to the railroad controversy in this state. It has been frequently asserted that he is backing the Rio Grande Co. as against the Atchison. This is not true. The following from the Denver Times is fairly accurate on this subject: "About two months before the beginning of the attorney general's suits, negotiations began between General Strong and S. H. H. Clark, of the Union Pacific for a pooling arrangement on all Denver business. This arrangement was finally consummated, and the main facts published in this paper at the time. That contract remains unimpaired to this time, and has been supplemented by a new and stronger alliance since Gould and Clark sailed for Europe, through their orders to S. T. Smith of the Kansas Pacific. We have good authority for the statement that if Gould has at any time supported General Palmer in his war against the Santa Fe, such support has been altogether withdrawn, and he is now in full accord with Messrs. Strong and Nickerson. He understands and has so stated that he cannot afford to fight so powerful a corporation as the Santa Fe for a mere temporary advantage. He is shrewd enough to desire that the latter shall retain the control of the narrow gauge, as that will prevent them from building a broad gauge to Denver, and by the pooling arrangement they are practically debarred from pushing out competing lines into northern Colorado and contending against the Union Pacific for the great traffic of this region. He is more than anxious at present to maintain his hold upon the north, because it is a lucrative traffic, and if he can perpetuate the control of the Santa Fe over the Rio Grande his control here cannot be seriously disturbed for several years at least. This view of the case is supported by substantial evidence. If true, what motive can Gould have for encouraging Gen. Palmer in his fight against the lessees? We have positive authority that he is not encouraging it, and will do nothing to derange the existing relations above set forth.

Finished.

The completion of the jetties' work as announced in our telegraphic columns this morning, certainly makes an eventful era in the commercial history of this city, and in the development of the future great trade of the Mississippi Valley, as well as in the remarkable life and successes of that indomitable man and great and unrivalled engineer, who has brought this work to such a speedy and surprising culmination.

It startles one's mind to attempt to realize that leading from the Gulf of Mexico into the Mississippi river, over and through an immense and apparently unyielding bar where but four years since a maximum depth of but eight feet could be obtained, there is this day a navigable channel of thirty feet depth, and that this fact records the completion of Capt. Eads' daring and extraordinary contract, and solves the greatest engineering feat ever attempted under private auspices and at private risk.

The work is done. But a few hours and wherever the telegraph extends will be heralded its triumphant conclusion. Where but four years ago there was hardly water sufficient to float an oyster lugger, the Great Eastern can to-day ride in safety.

Whereas, four years ago it was sometimes a hazardous and always an uncertain experiment for vessels drawing more than sixteen feet to attempt to enter our port, New Orleans is to-day open to the fleets and navies of the world.

So far as our prosperity and development are involved in commercial facilities, they are henceforward assured. So far as this city's destiny depended on her harbor being made accessible and convenient that consummation is now within our reach. The work is done. Human patience and courage and industry, backed by an indomitable and untiring will, and informed and directed by human skill, have applied the forces of nature to the accomplishment of an end too vast for merely artificial agencies, and the tremendous river which uncontrolled has been its own oppressor and imprisoner has now become its own liberator and savior.

There is no achievement of mechanical genius which compares with it in the splendor of its economics or in the magnitude of its results. There is no parallel instance of man's employment of the prodigious energies of nature in the realization of his aims. It stands alone in these respects as it does in almost incalculable possibilities which it has brought within our reach.

It is at once pathetic and astounding to look back four short years and recall no only the formidable, the seemingly hopeless difficulties of the task assumed by Capt. Eads, but the sneers, the discouragements, the open hostility of an almost unbroken front of public opinion.

Never was the advocate of a great idea made the focus of more misrepresentation, detraction, malice, enmity and official jealousy. Never was there a more determined and systematic effort to crush a man with the very magnitude and originality of his conceptions. We can afford to forget, or rather to forgive, all that to-day, however, in view of the superb victory he has achieved. Not alone has he hushed into utter silence the voice of envy and disparagement, but he has coerced and subjugated and converted into servitors of man the forces of the everlasting element. His triumph is celebrated in no glittering and gorgeous structure beautiful to the eye and impressive to the imagination; it is not written in marble nor perpetuated in storied urn or sculptured stone, but so long as commerce swarms into this port and nature's unfriendly action is held in check by his masterful and inflexible veto, so long will New Orleans and the Mississippi valley in their increase and their power accumulate the majestic tribute of human progress to the genius, courage and indomitable energy of Capt. James B. Eads. New Orleans Times.

Two Poems by Bayard Taylor.

[From the Midsummer Holiday Scribner.]

I. ANGEL.

Then let the Angel blow!—
A peal from the parted heaven,
The first of seven!—
For the time is come that was foretold
So long ago!
As the avalanche gathers, huge and cold,
From the down of the harmless snow,
The years, until the ages gather and hang
Till the day when the word is spoken
When they that dwell in the end of time
Are smitten alike for the early crime,
As the vials of wrath are broken!

Yes, the time hath come!—
Though Earth is rich, her children are dumb!
Ye cry: "Beware
Of the dancer's floating hair,
And the cymbal's clash, and the sound of pipe and drum!"
But the Prophet cries: "Beware
Of the hymn unheard, the unuttered prayer!
For ignorance is past,
And knowledge comes at last;
And the burden it brings to you how can ye bear?"

Away, let the Angel blow!
The seals are loosened that seemed to bind
The Future's kiss and woe!
For a shrinking soul, an uncertain mind,
For eyes that see, but are growing blind,
Your landmarks fade and change!
The colors today you borrow
Take another hue to-morrow,
The forms of your faith are wild and strange!
Walking, you stagger, and find—
Let the Angel blow!

Ah, shall the Angel blow?
Something must have remained,
Something fresh and unstained,
Springing from the common soil where the virtues grow!
Nay, it is not so!
Art succumbs to the coarser sense,
Greed o'ercometh sweet abstinence;
Of vices your young men talk,
In scarlet your young women walk,
And the zeal of honor that made you proud,
The loftier grace your lives avowed,
Are a passive corpse and a tattered shroud:
What you forget, can your children know?
So, let the Angel blow!

Yes, let the Angel blow!
A peal from the parted heaven,
The first of seven!—
The warning, not yet the sign, of woe!
That men arise
And look about them with wakened eyes,
Behold on their garments the dust and slime,
Refrain, forbear,
Accept the weight of a nobler care
And take reproach from the fallen time!

II. SONNET.

Where should the Poet's house and household be?
Beneath what skies, in what untroubled air
Sings he for very joy of songs so fair
That in their gladdest laws he most is free?
In woods remote, where darkly tree on tree
Let fall their curtained shadows to ensnare
His dreams, or bid in Fancy's happiest lair,
Some laughing island of the stormless sea?
Ah, never such to him their welcome gave!
But, flattered by the gods of finer form,
He drifts upon the world's unresting wave,
As drifts a sea-flower by the tempest torn
From sheltered porches of the coral cave
Where it expands, of calm and silence born.

The American "Pretty Girl."

The following portrait of one of our country-women in Europe which occurs in Mr. Henry James's new Scribner novelette, "Confidence," will be recognized by many on both sides of the water, as drawn from the life:

She was simply the American pretty girl, whom he had seen a thousand times. It was a numerous sisterhood pervaded by a strong family likeness. This young lady had charming eyes (of the color of Gordon's cravat) which looked everywhere at once and yet found time to linger in some places, where Longueville's own eyes frequently met them. She had soft brown hair, with a silky golden thread in it, beautifully arranged and crowned by a smart little hat that savored of Paris. She had also a slender little figure, neatly rounded, and delicate, narrow hands, prettily gloved. She moved about a great deal in her place, twisted her little flexible body and tossed her head, fingered her hair and examined the ornaments of her dress. She had a great deal of conversation, and she expressed herself with extreme frankness and decision. He asked her, to begin with, if she had been long at Baden, but the impetus of this question was all she required. Turning her charming, conscious, coquettish little face upon him, she instantly began to chatter.

"I have been here about four weeks. I don't know whether you call that long. It doesn't seem long to me. I have had such a lovely time. I have met ever so many people here I know every day some one turns up. Now you have turned up to-day."

"Ah, but you don't know me," said Longueville, laughing.

"Well, I have heard a great deal about you!" cried the young girl, with a pretty little stare of contradiction. "I think you know a great friend of mine, Miss Ella Maclane, of Baltimore. She's traveling in Europe now." Longueville's memory did not instantly respond to this signal, but he expressed that rapturous assent which the occasion demanded, and even risked the observation that the young lady from Baltimore was very pretty. "She's far too lovely," his companion went on; "I have often heard her speak of you. I think you know her sister rather better than you know her. She has not been out very long. She is just as interesting as she can be. Her hair comes down to her feet. She's traveling in Norway. She has been everywhere you can think of, and she's going to finish off with Finland. You can't go any further than that, can you? That's one comfort, she'll have to turn round and come back. I want her dreadfully to come to Baden-Baden."

"I wish she would," said Longueville. "Is she traveling alone?"

"Oh, no. They've got some Englishman. They say he's devoted to Ella. Every one seems to have an Englishman now. We've got one here, Captain Lovelock, Captain Augustus Lovelock. Well, they're awfully handsome. Ella Maclane is dying to come to Baden-Baden. I wish you'd write to her. Her father and mother have got some idea in their heads; they think it's improper, what do you call it?—immoral. I wish you'd write to her and tell her it isn't. I wonder if they think that Mrs. Vivian would come to a place that's immoral. Mrs. Vivian says she would take her in a moment; she doesn't seem to care how many she has. I declare, she's only too kind. You know I'm in Mrs. Vivian's care. My mother's gone to Franzensbad. She would let me go with Mrs. Vivian anywhere on account of the influence she thinks so much of Mrs Vivian's influence. I have always heard a great deal about it, haven't you? I must say it's lovely; it's had a wonderful effect upon me. I don't want to praise myself, but it has. You ask Mrs. Vivian if I haven't been good. I have been just as good as I can be. I've been so peaceful, I've just sat here this way. Do you call this immoral? You're not obliged to gamble if you don't want to. Ella Maclane's father seems to think you get drawn in. I'm sure I haven't been drawn in. I know what you're going to say—you're going to say I've been drawn out. Well, I have, to-night. We just sit here so quietly—there's nothing to do but to talk. We make a little party by ourselves—are you going to belong to our party? Two of us are missing. Miss Vivian and Captain Lovelock. Captain Lovelock has gone with her into the room to explain the gambling. Miss Vivian always wants everything explained. I am sure I understood it the first time I looked at the tables. Have you ever seen Miss Vivian? She's very much admired, she's so very unusual. Black hair's so uncommon. I see you've got it too—but I mean for young ladies. I am sure one sees everything here. There's a woman that comes to the tables—a Portugese countess—who has hair that is positively blue. I can't say I admire it when it comes to that shade. Blue's my favorite color, but I prefer it in the eyes." Longueville continued Longueville's companion, resting upon him her own two brilliant little specimens of the tint.

He listened with that expression of clear amusement which is not always an indication of high esteem, which even pretty chatterers, who are not the reverse of estimable, often prefer to masculine inattention; and while he listened Bernard, according to his wont, made his reflections. He said to himself that there were two kinds of pretty girls—the acutely conscious and the finely unconscious. Mrs. Vivian's protegee was a member of the former category; she belonged to the genus coquette. We all have our conception of the indispensable, and the indispensable, to this young lady, was a spectator; almost any male biped would serve the purpose. To her spectator she addressed for the moment the whole volume of her being—addressed it in her glances, her attitudes, her exclamations, in a hundred little experiments of tone and gesture and position. And these rustling artifices were so innocent and obvious that the directness of her desire to be well with her observer became in itself a grace; it led Bernard afterward to say to himself that the natural vocation and metier of little girls for whom existence was but a shimmering surface, was to prattle and ruffle their plumage, their view of life and its duties was as simple and superficial as that of an Oriental bayadere.

Sarah Bernhardt.

Some time ago I made a solemn engagement never to write of Sarah Bernhardt again in your columns and I broke it as soon as made because that many-sided genius was doing something or other I forget what that could not be ignored. In a postscript I entered into another engagement to the same effect and I am going to break it once more. The astounding news has just been flashed across the channel that she has sent in her resignation to the Theatre Francaise and has hired herself out for a starring tour in America for two millions of francs. Of the particulars of this wonderful venture I can as yet say nothing, for she is not here to be questioned, and Paris knows no more of it than I do. An American is carrying her off at this high bid, but the name of the rash man, the nature and duration of the proposed tour, in fact all the particulars of the engagement are at present unknown. It is no doubt somebody who has seen her in London, and who has been dazzled by her extraordinary success there. Sarah is certainly the rage in that capital. She dines with dukes every day that indeed would not be so very surprising but the duchesses are at the table as well. English society is going to the devil that is the general verdict on it on the part of the sober few, but the headstrong many think of nothing but how they can secure the honor of Sarah's company for an hour in boudoir or drawing-room. She has, made the English trip of this great company of French players one colossal advertisement of her own personality. Rules were laid down in advance to restrain her. She has calmly set them all at naught. The artistes were told that they were to live near the Gaiety Theatre; she took a house in Chester Square. They were forbidden to play at private entertainments; she has earned ten times her salary by representations at the houses of the "nobility and gentry." For this she may plead a charitable excuse. How else are the bishops and clergy of all denominations to see her, bound, as they are, by their holy horror of the play house, and of course they are just as eagerly curious as any of the rest. "Gloucester and Bristol" was among her audience at Mrs Knight's the other day, and his are by no means the only gaiters that have indulged in this profane delight. The society journals are calling out loudly for a little good old-fashioned English shame, and are wanting to know why when so many of her social superiors are shut out of the heaven of high life for a single blot on their passports of respectability, this foreign woman should be admitted without so much as a demand for her papers? The Orleans Club (for ladies and gentlemen) has apparently seen the justice of this protest and has inflicted about the only humiliation Sarah has had to endure by declining to admit her as a guest to the institution. There is indeed a party for her as well as a party against, but the ayes carry it by an overwhelming majority of fortune and position. The papers bark but nobody minds them. Thus "Mademoiselle" Bernhardt, says one them, has a son fourteen years old. We never hear of his papa. Will somebody produce Monsieur Bernhardt? Meanwhile she holds the exceedingly uneven tenor of her way under the impulse of a craving for notoriety that nothing seems to sate. The other day she held a reception for the private display of her paintings and statuary which was attended by Prince Leopold, Mr. Gladstone and a crowd of that mark. She likes it, and London likes it, and that seemed enough for both of them till Paris broke out into loud complaint. The Figaro especially took her to task for degrading French historionic art and a great national establishment in the eyes of the foreigner, and asked with great bitterness when she would condescend to confine herself to her true part as a member of the company and nothing more. No sooner did this expostulation reach her than she replied to it by telegraph—her wrath being a great deal too impatient to wait for the post—threatening resignation and hinting that the paper had made itself the mouthpiece of the jealousy of a rival. The rival in question was clearly poor Croizette, whom Sarah has clean snuffed out in this London visit. Sarah's enemies admit that she has genius, while Croizette's friends do not venture to claim so much for her. Sarah has played her down, and even her trump card, the "Sphinx," has not brought her a single trick. The announcement of the American engagement comes as a sort of postscript to the telegraphed letter. It is Sarah's way of bringing Paris to its senses after driving London mad. It remains to be seen whether Paris will let her have it all her own way. Her resignation is one thing; the acceptance of it by the French government, which holds her written bond to play for a term of years, is another. The best counter-stroke, however, would be to take her at her word and to let her go to one short season's success of curiosity among a people who do not speak her language, and who feel no overpowering interest in her individuality to return a humble suppliant for praise to Paris, which, after all, alone knows how to value her at her true artistic worth. Richard Whiteing in New York World.

COTTONWOOD

Hot Springs,

CHAFFEE COUNTY, COLO.

PROPRIETORS.

REV. JOSEPH ADAMS, MRS. J. A. D. ADAMS, Homœpathic Physician, and MR. G. K. HARTENSTEIN, Attorney at Law, Leadville.

The Springs are situated at the mouth of Cottonwood Cañon, in a most beautiful country, salubrious atmosphere, surrounded by scenery of the most gorgeous description, being in the very heart of the Saguache range—Mount Yale lying to the north, and Mount Princeton to the south. The crystal waters of the Cottonwood River, abundant with trout, come dashing and sparkling down past the door of the Sanitarium from its fountain head, the eternal beds of snow which cap the hoary old mountain.

The following analysis, connected with six years' experience, warrant us in saying that they are a specific for catarrh, sore eyes, rheumatism, lead poisons, and all scrofulous affections:

Invitations are out for a grand hop at this favorite hotel to-morrow evening when a "just too awfully splendid time" is expected.

Our City Gas Works.

To the Editor of the Gazette:

In your issue of this morning we notice quite a lengthy article on the above subject and myself with one or two others censured and blamed with endeavoring to defeat, or at least "throw cold water" on the enterprise. Now if this gave the facts in the case we should let it pass, but as it does not, and does not seem inclined to let the people know what the proposed plans are nor why there is this slight opposition, we would like the privilege of explaining.

There is no citizen that desires the introduction of gas more than the writer, but the contract if entered into (although our learned Washingtonian says there is no contract) is for twenty-five years, and we have felt that should have a little time for consideration.

As far as we can learn there has been but one manufacturing establishment consulted in regard to this matter. For some unknown reason there has been a disposition on the part of some to accept their proposition as the very lowest that could be had. There has been no disposition by any member of the council to postpone this matter indefinitely, nor was there any motion made to that effect at our last meeting. The motion was to postpone further consideration for, say two weeks, until other manufacturers could be heard from.

Every one knows that the cheaper our works are built the lower the gas can be furnished to our citizens. A little competition just now might have some effect. True there has been some delay, what has been the result? The ordinance granting the right of way that was first brought before us placed the maximum price of gas at $3.50 per thousand. The one last night placed it at $3.00. Why this change? Our city happened to be visited by another gentleman whose business was the construction of such works. Do not know that he was asked to make a proposition but privately he stated that he would furnish the gas at $3.00. Now does not fifty cents per thousand on the gas for this city for 25 years well repay us for the few days delay? We do not feel afraid of a "freeze up" to-day neither do we feel afraid of being left in eternal darkness if this one eastern company does not build our works, although am perfectly willing they should do the work provided they are willing to do it as advantageously for the city as any other company.

This is the whole cause of the opposition and delay and we are now willing to leave the matter to the people as to whether it was just or not.

A CITIZEN.

Lawrence Barrett in A New Play.

The appearance of Lawrence Barrett in our city may justly be considered a dramatic event. Notwithstanding the inadequate accommodations of the stage of Court House Hall, the play was presented in a manner which proved the supremacy of genius over circumstances.

The drama called "A New Play" is a remarkable production worthy of the commendation which it has received from the press and public.

The audience was large, and the enthusiasm with which the great master of tragic expression was received was a testimonial to his power. Mr. Barrett is a student of human nature and a master of expression. In the very whirlwind of his passion he never oversteps the boundaries of art.

The play last night was one whose key note was jealousy. Not that fierce and turbulent passion which drove the Moor to the tragic termination of his life and love, but a more subtle, yet equally disastrous passion, gnawing at the heart of a gentler and better man. The grace and dignity of the actor were displayed to excellent advantage in this sombre drama. In the finer and more delicate expressions of emotion Barrett is pre-eminent. His power and pathos were felt by all last night.

Mr. Barrett's support was fairly adequate, Miss Ada Gilman being especially effective in the character of Mistress Alice.

The lovers of the legitimate drama and of true art enjoyed the evening's entertainment to the fullest, and Mr. Barrett's reception was neither cold nor unsympathetic.

During the third act, a long wait occurred and some surprise was excited in the audience. It was noticed that there was considerable confusion on the stage, and when anxious enquiries were made by the stage people for a physician, the sympathy of the audience was greatly excited. Dr. Anderson was present and immediately went to the assistance of the person that needed medical aid, who proved to be Miss Ada Gilman, who had been suddenly seized with a slight hemorrhage. In a short time, however, the young lady was sufficiently recovered to resume her role, and the play proceeded to a successful termination without further interruption.

The Mormons in Colorado.

The Denver Tribune gives the following facts concerning the Mormon settlement in this state: "The new Mormon settlement at Manassa, in Conejos county, is thriving, and large additions are daily expected for the new town of Ephraim. This new town, which has been lately laid out three and a half miles northeast of Manassa, is one mile in length by one-half mile in breadth. The city is to be built similar to that of Manassa, namely: In thirty-two blocks centering to a public square, and one thousand acres of land cut up into ten acre lots divided among the settlers according to the number of their families. The streets are six rods wide, and water for irrigation purposes will be brought by ditch one and a quarter miles, from the junction of the Conejos and San Antonio rivers, the fall being six feet to the mile. Erastus Prow, one of the twelve apostles at Salt Lake, will in person accompany thirty families from there to Ephraim, where it is their intention to locate. It is the intention of the Mormons of both settlements to build a tannery, and a flouring and a woolen mill, as the claim they are a self-sustaining people, and prefer to supply each other, than have to purchase poor goods manufactured in eastern markets."

Concerning Crops.

The hay crop will be light in Las Animas county this year, according to an informant of the Trinidad News.

The San Luis valley is suffering from a lack of rain. The weather is hot.

A correspondent of the Evans Journal writing from Platteville, states that all the crops in that neighborhood promise quite well in spite of the dry season. Some of the wheat is excellent. As a general thing the straw is very low but the grain is well headed and well filled.

The Trinidad News grows eloquent over agricultural prospects. It says "The crops up the river in the Purgatoire valley are growing nicely, and are the subject of much admiration by travelers through the valley. Fields of swaying grain are fairly inviting the sickle, and the yield of wheat and oats will be a most satisfactory one to the husbandmen. According to the Boulder Banner the farmers in that vicinity have commenced cutting rye, and we may say that some pieces of wheat will be down by the last of the week. Next week harvesting will be pretty generally begun. Those fields which have had plenty of water will yield a good crop.

The Price of Wool.

We have received the following circular from Coats Brothers, of Philadelphia, concerning the price of wool for the present month:

As is usual at midsummer the markets are now well supplied with wool of almost every description; consequently there is not the eagerness on the part of manufacturers to obtain supplies which was noticeable early in the season when wool was scarce. Prices have now settled somewhat and are now steady though trade is quiet. The receipts are largely in excess of sales as might be expected at this time of the year. The unusual rise in values and early purchasing has naturally been followed by quiet markets now that supplies are abundant and consumers do not have the incentive of probable higher prices to induce them to buy ahead of wants. Some few of the mills seem to have considerable stock, but the majority, we believe, have but small supplies, and may be expected to be in maket continually for their immediate needs. Reports from many parts of the country indicate that a large proportion of the wool clip has already passed out of the hands of growers and is largely held by operators and speculators, about the usual proportion having already gone to the consumer. Some of these bunched lots have come to market and are awaiting buyers, while others are held in the country. The general disposition on the part of holders seems to be to accept the present prices and realize their profit, but there is much more wool offering than can be quickly sold at market rates, and to press sales faster than manufacturers are inclined to buy results in such offers as owners of wool are unwilling to accept. While consignors generally wish to sell quickly at market rates, yet they are not willing to ensure prompt sales by material concessions.

Colorado and New Mexican wools have so far kept fairly sold up at good prices, but they must be expected to sympathize with other descriptions, and it is possible the market may not be so quick on them as it has been. They now command the following prices:

Choice fine, selected	25@30
Improved, selected	22@25
" Average	20@22
Coarse, carpet stock, light or clean	18@19
" " heavy or greasy	16@17
Fall clip, coarse	18@19
" Medium and fine	20@25
Black	15@16

Burrows' Park.

The following interesting letter concerning a mining district in the San Juan country that is now attracting considerable attention, is taken from the Silver World:

With the music of the brook in one's ears and the mountain peaks sparkling, as a gem sparkles, with the rays of a rosy sunset, it is difficult to sit down to write prosy facts about mines and mineral, even though mines are many and the thunder of blasting tunnels and shafts is constantly reverberating. Still the poetic part of this country needs a "blast" too, in the shape of a good strong endorsement, for nowhere in my wild wanderings have I seen a place where nature has so beautifully embellished the picture with glen and valley, cataract and peak. We may have wilder scenery in the San Juan, but I think none more beautiful and weird, and nature seems to have sanctified it by placing high in the heavens a cross, perfect as a model, of white quartz. It looks like a fleecy platelding from the valley, but the cross and upright measure 32 and 40 feet respectively.

But it is the purpose of this article to advert to a few facts regarding the park.

Some few years since, before the era of carbonate excitements, Burrows Park received a large influx of miners and ranchmen, along with other camps in the San Juan country, consquent on the reported great wealth of the San Juan country. Two towns were laid out here and many cabins erected. But the wealth was not the kind they expected. It was bound up in fissure veins and required labor and capital to be extracted; whereas those who came here, to use an old resident's expression, "brought sacks along expecting to find the native metals in the soil and sack it up." Many located good claims but did not attempt to work them. When therefore, the gilded (with gold) reports came of rich placers in Arizona, with diamonds to be had for the picking up, along with seductive reports from the carbonate fields of Leadville and vicinity, there was a general rush for the new districts and the park was left a vacant ground cabins untenanted, streets depopulated, and rich lodes without owners. Perhaps two or three miners who had good judgment, seeing with keen insight the wealth hidden in these mountains, remained, and now have the felicity of enjoying the present as well as prospective results of their stay, and of witnessing the return of many of their old friends who were disappointed in venturing to new fields.

The park, in common with other camps, over the range is now witnessing a revival of business that is evidently substantial and permanent.

Among the sales of the season may be mentioned the Inez lode on Engineer Mountain at the reported figures of $60,000, purchased by an eastern company. Mr. Draper, of Lake City, is mining superintendent. A tunnel of 100 feet is now being pushed on the vein, with satisfactory results, some good milling ore being taken out and sacked, containing ruby and brittle silver. A crosscut of 100 feet is also soon to be started. Apropos of this, it may be mentioned that Mr. Campbell of Cincinnati, now residing at the park, owns the location.

"Jack" Williams, of the park is a recent purchaser at administrator's sale, of the Cebolla load, up Silver creek. He has brought down some beautiful specimens of ore containing a large percentage of brittle silver.

The Del Norte lode is reported sold.

The Seward county lode is being worked.

Tim. Clawson is about making a sale to a Chicago party, represented here by a Mr. Kinley, and has started an exploring shaft of 100 feet on the lode.

Mr. Leonard Lowe, one of the owners of the famous Napoleon lode, has discovered an extension and feels "high" over it. Although containing very rich ore, Mr. Lowe thinks the Napoleon a spur of the large vein on White Cross Mountain on which are the Fannie and Genevieve lodes, located by John Bradshaw and now owned by Bradshaw, J. W. Mills, Cover and Whittemore. This famous vein, (an extension being owned by Commissioner Bent) will probably some day astonish the San Juan country with its wealth of mineral, and should properly be called the Comstock of Colorado.

An extension of the Black Wonder has recently been found by John Bradshaw, who has clinched the "find" by working a fourteen foot assessment. Bradshaw has also purchased the remaining half interest in the Spartan lode, on Ida Mountain, of Mr. Finley for $300, a lode yet undeveloped but showing very fine surface ore.

The reduction works here belonging to the Pekin (Ill.) company are likely to be in operation again soon. But of this more in my next.

On Sunday last a moving apparition was seen coming up the road in the park, heading for Chapman's cabin. On nearer approach a man was seen, and on closer examination of his extremities a burro was found beneath them, and on still closer examination (with a microscope) the burro was found to be carrying the man, nothing but its ears being visible. It was our old friend, and a genial gentleman, Chapman, who has been up in the woods so long without an almanac that he mistook the day and the weather for the first of May, and came over to move his "duds and calamities" to his new cabin at the Washington mine, up Cincinnati gulch. Chapman has some fine lodes in the gulch, notably the extension of the famous Washington mine, and is well warranted in looking after them.

Chapman wintered in the gulch all of last winter, along with a mountain lion as his only company. They were not partners exactly, as Chapman kept the inside of the cabin and the lion the outside. Still the lion was a help in a great many ways. It invariably broke the snow for him every fresh fall, and in the matter of sociability always "broke the ice" first, and was also a perfect barometer in foretelling a storm, raising a significant howl immediately preceding every fall of snow. It grew uncommonly sociable, in fact as the cold increased it seemed to "warm up" to Chapman more and more. Chapman, singularly enough, determined to dissolve partnership with the partner of his "jaws," and gave him a dose of cold but active poison. The poison was so active that the lion left the region in jumps of thirty feet each and has not since re-appeared. C. hunted for him for days to give him a decent burial, as became a partner, but never found him.

I will close by saying that the park is full of game, and fresh wild meat is plentiful here. Jack Williams to-day killed a fine mountain sheep near by Argentum, and some sheep recently stumbled over the tent ropes of a camping party. Bears are numerous in the woods, especially in Grizzly gulch. A large cinnamon bear recently came into town, with an eye on Mr. Bent's burros, but was driven off over the hill by some men. We shall have to have a law to stop these bears or go a-hunting.

J. S. Wolfe, collector of internal revenue of this state, is in the city. He has been south on business, but could not pass Colorado Springs.
